Ocean Beach School Exercises Thursday

Promotion exercises for the largest class ever to leave the Ocean Beach school will be held on Thursday afternoon, June 13, at 2 p. m., in the new school auditorium. The program will consist of talks by Mary Phyllis Parker of the low six grade, Billy Nelson of the high six grade, music and the presentation of the class by Mr. Barbour, principal.

A number of the members of this class are "old-timers" in Ocean Beach, having attended the Ocean Beach school from either the kindergarten or the first grade straight thru the sixth grade. They are Teresa McConnell, Dolores Carl, Barbara Mehling, Merna Whorrell, Dorothy Morrison, Shelby Boles, Elaine Carl, Margaret Goeb, Betty Groeschel, Vellah Mae Kelly, Elizabeth Long, Florence MacCausland, Joan Soper, Alice Kimball Daun, Jack Maddox, Walter Marshall, Billy Nelson, Melvin Sanders and Alexander Watson.

Honor protege pins for outstanding records in citizenship and scholarship are to be given to Dolores Carl, Peggy Jane Truax, Margaret Stark, Merna Whorrell, Douglas Jensen, Charles Peterson, Edwin Bennett, Kimball Daun, Donald Davis, Billy Frazier, Jack Maddox, Harry Malcolm, Ray Markland, Walter Marshall, John Masters, Billy Nelson and Alexander Watson. Shelby Boles, Dorothy Burton, Elaine Carl, Margaret Goeb, Genevra Gray, Grace Jacks, Vellah Mae Kelly, Eileen Killebrew, Elizabeth Long, Florence MacCausland, Margaret Mathis, Joan Soper, Evelyn Stewart, Alice Utiger and Elizabeth Wisdom.

Thrift certificates have been earned by Margaret Goeb, Joan Soper, Evelyn Stewart, Pauline Gates and Dolores Carl.

Bank helpers certificates have been earned by Billy Frazier, Warren Stone and John Masters.

The two members of the class who were chosen chairmen of opening exercises and assemblies were Edwin Bennett and Dolores Shepard. This is the highest honor that can come to a student in the Ocean Beach school and is awarded on the basis of school citizenship.

Parent Teacher Ass'n

INSTALLATION NEW OFFICERS

Ocean Beach PTA board meeting was held Wednesday at 1:30 p. m., in the home of Mrs. J. W. McCausland, unit president. Preparations were made for June meeting Wednesday, June 12, 2 p. m. in the school auditorium.

This June meeting is the final one of the year and will be an exceptional one in that our Ocean Beach teachers will be hostesses for the day. Parents of our school children are invited guests. Door prize. Let us see which room wins the attendance of parents. Music will be furnished by Mrs. Miriam Frieze.

Installation of incoming officers under direction of Mrs. R. R. Lewis, of La Jolla, sponsor from S. D. Council. Presentation of past president's honors to our junior past president, Mrs. J. W. McCausland.

Highlights of convention by incoming president, Mrs. Esther Wisdom, and first vice president, Mrs. T. M. Welch.

Mrs. Vivian Bowling, better films chairman of Ocean Beach PTA has purchased a ranch near Ramona

ROBERTS BAKERY NOW OPERATES TWO TRUCKS

Roberts DeLux Bakery, which makes daily delivery to the housewife's door, reports they are now better able to take care of their growing list of customers, especially Ocean Beach people. Their first truck operated almost entirely at Mission Beach. Then some five or six weeks ago they bought a new truck to make closer delivery here. Just a few days after getting the second truck started, a wreck happened and again they had only the one truck for service.

Now Roberts tell us, they are able to give prompt and satisfactory daily delivery, so watch for their specials as advertised elsewhere in this issue, and order your Sunday and daily dessert and bakery products from this home bakery.

With two good bakeries in Ocean Beach there is no need of patronizing trucks coming in from elsewhere, and will now reside there. Friends of Mrs. Bowling will be invited to visit her just as soon as she takes down and sends us her new house number. We hope she remembers to send us her address, for Ramona is a beautiful place for a day's visit.

Enthusiastic Residents Point Loma High School Plan Old Time Barbecue Has 105 Graduates

An enthusiastic meeting of local committees for an Old Timers Barbecue at Ocean Beach, June 29th, was held Wednesday night at the Woman's club house.

Mrs. Albert Dumont was named general chairman of the Barbecue dinner.

The V.F.W. will have charge of the parade which will form at the Ocean Beach school grounds at 10 a. m., going north to Voltaire street, west on Voltaire two blocks to Bacon street, then south on Bacon street to Newport avenue and west on Newport to the beach and place of serving barbecue in the recreational center building at foot of Santa Monica avenue.

The parade will be an old time affair with carts, buggies, old time autos and floats of different beach organizations and businesses. Decorated floats have been promised for the parade by the Woman's club, Kiwanis club, PTA, V.F.W. and auxiliary and others. Business houses who will enter a float are asked to leave word at the Ocean Beach News office and information will then be given by the parade committee.

Several bands will be here it is reported, with one or more taking part in the parade, then at 2 p. m., the SERA band will render a two-hour concert.

There will be races and sports on the beach at 3 p. m., and a street dance at 8 p. m., under auspices of the Young Men's North Shore Political club.

Banners and other decorations will be procured and a real gala celebration is hoped for with every person and business of Ocean Beach participating.

KIWANIANS HEAR ABOUT CITY SCHOOL PURCHASES

Dick Barbour was chairman of the day at Wednesday Kiwanis luncheon, the guest speaker being Earl Thayer, purchasing agent for the San Diego city schools.

Mr. Thayer gave a summary of the duty of the purchasing department and told about the high efficiency with which each department is recorded in order that the school board may know definitely what school and what department is costing the most to conduct, as well as what efficiency is maintained in these different departments. The speaker said the city school system was composed of 36 elementary schools and 10 high school buildings with 6 other buildings composing the total group of 52 buildings being used. The cafeteria's of the organization did a volume of about $150,000 annually and were self-sustaining. The Ocean Beach elementary unit for the past year cost $81,255 with $47,000 of this going for a new building.

Dad Thayer, honorary member of Ocean Beach club, has returned from Phoenix, Arizona, and was present.

The following members of the La Jolla club were in attendance: Col. Bill Kennedy, Paul Arnold, Ed Edmiston, Keith Ferguson, Frank Harmon and Mrs. Harmon.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE TO MEET AT 7 P. M.

Ocean Beach chamber of commerce in its meeting of next Monday night will convene at 7 p. m., one hour earlier than usual, so that members may go to Ocean Beach school and there attend the reception to be given Mr. and Mrs. Richmond Barbour, who have been granted leave of absence for a year, that Mr. Barbour may attend Yale University.

SAN FRANCISCANS VISIT HERE

Mrs. Bert Griffith and Miss Elsie Solenberger of San Francisco, the latter a sister of U. J. Solenberger of Ocean Beach, visited the Solenbergers at 5076 Niagara Ave., this week.

The northern city folks came down to see the Exposition and Mrs. Griffith to look for a beauty parlor location.

Chamber Commerce Dues Payable

1935 dues for Ocean Beach Chamber of Commerce are now payable to the secretary-treasurer, H. H. Hartvigsen, 1922 Bacon St.

Principal Barbour To Attend Yale

Richmond Barbour, principal of Ocean Beach school the past three terms, has been fortunate in the award of a scholarship for an assistant instructor on elementary school education at Yale University, New Haven, Conn., and will leave shortly after school is out to take advantage of this splendid opportunity, in which he will teach part time and continue his own studies in the department of education.

Mr. Barbour has made an enviable reputation in the Ocean Beach school and has asked for a year's leave of absence, which has been granted by the city school board. Dick received his A. B. at State College and Master of Science degree at U. S. C. and we trust he will be back with us again when he leaves Yale. His efforts have been appreciated by Ocean Beach parents and his many friends here.

SILVER SPRAY HOTEL REGISTER MANY GUESTS

Out of town and out of state guests registered at Silver Spray hotel recently are: Major and Mrs. S. H. Okell of Victoria, B. C.; Geo. Helmrichs of Great Falls, Montana; Lester Reed, U. S. Naval Training Station; Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Peck of Shreveport, La.; M. H. Matrick of the Walt Disney studios, Hollywood; Mrs. John W. Wetzel of San Diego; and George R. Marks.

NEW COTTAGE ON VOLTAIRE

Frances E. Bartlett 4768 Voltaire street, is building a new frame cottage at the above address, to cost in neighborhood of $1,000.

SURPRISE BREAKFAST GIVEN FOR U. J. SOLLENBERGER

May 30th, at 9:30 a. m., Mrs. U. J. Solenberger, 5076 Niagara avenue, gave a surprise breakfast for her husband in honor of his birthday. A southern style breakfast was served, followed by the guests playing five hundred. Beautiful flowers decorated the breakfast table.

Invited guests were Mr. and Mrs. M. Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Gebhart, Mr. and Mrs. Glen McClure, Mrs. Martha Kempf, Mrs. Jack Gooch, Miss Yvonne Graybau and the guest of honor.

By far the largest class ever to graduate from Point Loma high school will receive their diplomas on Thursday evening, June 13th in the Point Loma high school auditorium. Superintendent Will C. Crawford will be the principal speaker and Jacob Weinberger, newly appointed member of the board of education will present the diplomas.

Miss Rosemary Moata, who has made an enviable scholastic record, will be the valedictorian of the class. Others among the honor scholarship group are Jeanne Lehman, Stuart Fraser, Nina Kline, Mary Shreve, George Motikawa and Ella Cook.

The Reverend James H. Hughes of the Ocean Beach Methodist church will offer the invocation and Robert Merritt, class president, will lead the class and the audience in the pledge of allegiance to the flag. The Point Loma high school orchestra, under the direction of Myron E. Green, will play for the procession and reception and will present selected ballet music from the opera "Rosamunde" by Franz Schubert as the musical feature of the program.

Because of the limited facilities of the Point Loma auditorium, admission to the graduation exercises will be by ticket only, each graduate having received seven tickets to distribute among relatives and friends.

The public is cordially invited to attend the vespers service of the class, however, which will be held Sunday, June 9th, at 4:30 p. m. at the First Methodist church, Ninth and "C" streets. The Reverend Myron Insko, father of one of the graduates, will deliver the vespers sermon.

Reception To Honor Attorney Camparet To School Principal Review Book at Forum

There will be a reception in the Ocean Beach school auditorium Monday evening, June 10, from 8 to 10 p. m. for Mr. and Mrs. Richmond Barbour, honoring our school principal, and in recognition of his very fine work done among our children. Representatives of all Ocean Beach civic organizations have been asked to be in the receiving line, with the PTA. Mr. Barbour has been presented with a scholarship in Yale university, where he will spend the summer.

Friends and parents of Ocean Beach school, cordially invited to this reception.

OCEAN BEACH BASEBALLERS FINALLY LOSE GAME

After winning two dozen straight games of Sunday base ball the Ocean Beach team last Sunday lost a 3 to 1 contest with the Cramers Bakery team. The game was played at University Heights. Elmer Hill hurled for the bakers.

Red Watters pitching for Ocean Beach allowed only six hits in the contest, but that was too many.

Myron Green was called to Los Angeles, Saturday by the serious illness of his mother. He returned home Sunday evening.

Attorney Bert Camparet will be the speaker at the Town Hall Forum in Ocean Beach school next Tuesday evening. Atty. Camparet will review for his audience, Kallit's, One Hundred Million Guinea Pigs. Those who have not read this interesting book on American life, should come to the Forum. It is free. No charge or collection of any kind.

Music will be furnished, commencing at 7:30, to be followed by the book review at 8 p. m.

Adult classes organized by Mr. Hunter, formerly in charge of the Forums, will be discontinued for the summer months.

POINT LOMA HIGH SCHOOL GIRL SCOUTS

First class Girl Scouts of Silver Arrow troop are planning a historical program to be presented over KGB, Thursday, June 27. The script has been corrected by Mrs. Winifred Davidson. Cast of characters later.

Summer troop will begin June 19, at Girl Scout Little House, in the Pepper grove. Mrs. Beatrice Fish, assisted by Mrs. Ottila Prince Shields will take over the second class instruction.

L. Mooso, is building a private garage at 1743 Cable street.

CURRENT EVENTS PASS IN REVIEW

TVA CHARGED WITH WASTEFUL AND IRREGULAR DOINGS— SMITH BOOM GROWS.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union

SECRET hearings were opened by the house military affairs committee to investigate charges that the Tennessee Valley authority already has squandered $1,000,000 of government money in questionable awards of contracts for dynamite and powder and through other irregularities. Arthur E. Morgan, head of the TVA, and his two fellow directors, David Lilienthal and Harcourt A. Morgan, were summoned before the committee.

A. E. Morgan

The charges are contained in an audit of the TVA made by Comptroller General J. R. McCarl. Some of the irregularities he claims to have uncovered are:

The awarding without competitive bidding of a contract which obligated the government for an indefinite sum of money, estimated at $835,000.

Overpayments of an original contract by as much as 120 per cent.

Awarding of contracts, in contravention of law, to firms which were not the low bidders, with one contract going to a bidder who was seventh from low.

Failure to require one large contractor to post performance bond and at the same time the payment of fees to this contractor in advance, despite a legal prohibition against advance payments.

Solicitation of bids by telephone or circulars among a certain group of private business houses, or in other irregular ways.

The TVA directors were said to be prepared to disprove the worst of the charges, and to be ready to make some disclosures of their own, especially concerning the submission of uniform bids by nine munitions companies.

The inquiry came as the administration was trying to get the house committee to report favorably the bill, recently passed by the senate, providing more money for the TVA and enlarging its scope of operations.

HOUSE leaders were hurrying toward passage the administration's amendments to the AAA act, enlarging the powers of that organization, the demand of opponents for long debate being denied. It was certain this measure would arouse controversy in the senate. Jobbers and retailers of foodstuffs, of whom there are about 111,000 in the country, are much disturbed by these proposed amendments for the measure extends to them the processing taxes now imposed on food manufacturers, makes them subject to regulations not yet specified and requires that each one be licensed by the AAA.

FIRST of the list of projects to be undertaken under the works relief program is the Passamaquoddy tidal power scheme, and there is a lot of grumbling because it was placed at the head of the line by the President himself.

This project was once turned down as uneconomical by Secretary Ickes, the assertion being that it would cost too much in comparison with the returns that might be expected, would take too long for completion and was in a region where so much work relief was not needed. But Mr. Roosevelt, whose Campobello summer cottage is near the location of the proposed dam site, is said to be personally interested in the project, believing it will bring new industries to the area. Another argument in its favor is that the old question of the practicability of harnessing the ocean tides may be settled by it.

Anyhow, this big Maine project is to go ahead, and Maj. Philip B. Fleming of the army engineers corps has been chosen to take charge of the construction. Major Fleming has been serving in the PWA for some time but has been released for this Eastport work.

Major Fleming

IN AN executive order the President established pay rates under the $4,880,000,000 work-relief measure, dividing the country into four sections in setting regional wages. Pay will range from $19 a month for unskilled laborers in the South to $94 a month for professional and technical workers in the East. The wages will be from 20 to 30 per cent below the prevailing wage rate structure throughout the country.

WHEN Dennis Chavez was brought into the senate to be sworn in as successor to the late Bronson Cutting of New Mexico, six "liberal" members silently walked out of the chamber in protest against the efforts that had been made to unseat Mr. Cutting. Those who participated in this unprecedented action were: Senators Hiram Johnson, California; William E. Borah, Idaho; George Norris, Nebraska; and Gerald P. Nye, North Dakota, Republican Independents; and Robert M. LaFollette, Wisconsin Progressive; and Henrik Shipstead, Minnesota Farmer-Laborite.

CERTAIN Republicans, most of them business men and financiers, have started a movement for the nomination of Alfred E. Smith for President by the Republican convention. The idea seems rather fantastic but its sponsors profess to believe that such a fusion nomination would attract great numbers of conservatives and offer the best chance to defeat Mr. Roosevelt. Other Republicans are talking about making Lewis Douglas of Arizona, former director of the budget, their candidate; he also is a Democrat.

Charles C. Hellinger of New York is chairman of a Smith-for-President committee, a non-partisan organization, and he reports that the Smith boom is gaining headway and that national headquarters will be opened this summer. Membership in the committee, he asserts, has more than doubled in the last month, much of the enrollment being voluntary. Mr. Smith has neither assented to this boom nor discouraged it.

SENATOR WAGNER of New York and Representative Cresser of Ohio offered in the senate and house identical railroad labor pension bills drafted in a way to meet the objections of the Supreme court to the law it declared unconstitutional. Because of the "must" list of measures demanded by the President, this bill may not be acted on in this session.

As re-drafted, the Wagner-Cresser bill seeks to meet specifically the ruling of the majority of the Supreme court that congress had exceeded its authority by legislating for the welfare of the workers; by invading the field of intrastate commerce, and by imposing drastic pensions provisions.

FOUR thousand farmers, gathered from all parts of the country, invaded Washington and told President Roosevelt and Secretary Wallace that they were enthusiastic believers in the efficiency of the AAA program and supporters of the amendments which the administration asks congress to make in the agricultural adjustment act.

Mr. Roosevelt addressed, from the south portico of the White House, what he called a "surprise party," and prefaced his remarks with the statement that "a great many of the high and mighty" have been deliberately trying to mislead many people by "lying about the kind of a farm program under which this nation is operating." He went on to deny emphatically that the government has "wastefully destroyed food in any form."

Next day many of the visiting farmers were in the senate gallery and heard Senator Daniel O. Hastings of Delaware, Republican, score the President for characterizing critics of the AAA program as liars.

Senator Hastings then introduced a resolution calling upon the secretary of agriculture to submit all correspondence between the department and the visiting farmers, together with any instructions sent out to county agents with a view of producing the "spontaneous" visitation. Mr. Hastings also demanded to know how the delegates were selected and what financial assistance "directly or indirectly" was extended to them by the agricultural officials.

Over in the house Representative Fish of New York started a lively debate on the same topic, and he was even more outspoken than Mr. Hastings.

Riechberg has let it be known that he intends to retire from government work by July 1 and, after a long rest, to resume law practice. It is believed that W. Averill Harriman, NRA executive officer, and Sol Rosenblatt, head of the compliance section, also will resign.

RUSSIA'S immense airplane, the Maxim Gorky, largest land plane in the world, was destroyed when it collided with a small training plane over a Moscow suburb, collapsed at a height of 2,000 feet and fell in ruins. All on board, 48 in number, were killed, as was the pilot of the small plane. The victims were mostly engineers and workers of the Central Aerodynamic Institute and members of their families who were being taken for a pleasure ride.

The Maxim Gorky was a show plane rather than a practical ship and was used for spreading Soviet propaganda. It was built by popular subscription in 1934 and was an all metal, eight-motored monoplane with a wing spread of 200 feet and a fuselage 100 feet long, and was most elaborately equipped. The Soviet government announced immediately after the disaster that it would build three more giant planes of the same type.

NEVER recovering consciousness after a motorcycle accident, Col. Thomas E. Lawrence—the glamorous "Lawrence of Arabia" of war days—died in a military hospital in Dorset, England. Yet in his twenties when he organized the revolt of the Arabs against Turkey, Lawrence gained undying fame. When after the peace King George sought to reward him, he refused on the ground that injustice had been done to his friends the Arabs. He changed his name to T. E. Shaw and devoted himself to experimental work in aeronautics. His writings included a brilliant account of his experiences in Arabia and a translation of the Odyssey.

PRESIDENT SMETONA of Lithuania saved from the firing squad four Nazis convicted of plotting to restore Memel to Germany, commuting their sentences to life imprisonment. Germany had been making a terrific row about the case, and was not at all satisfied with Smetona's action, holding that it did not correct the injustice.

Italy is willing to make peace with Ethiopia, agreeing to arbitrate their disputes and to cease from further military measures, but on terms that Emperor Haile Selassie probably will not accept. These terms, as reported to London by Sir Eric Drummond, British ambassador to Rome, are:

First—The integrity and independence of Ethiopia are to be respected. Second—Ethiopia must accept a division of the country into three zones of influence. One-third of the country, the Anglo-Sudan frontier, would be in the British zone. It would include Lake Tsana, which is the source of the upper Blue Nile which flows into the Nile at Khartoum. Another third would be within the French zone of influence. It would cover the railway from Djibuti, French Somaliland, to Addis Ababa, capital of Ethiopia. The third zone, under Italian influence, would include all highlands, which are suitable for Italian immigration and which comprise the only fertile section.

One of Italy's complaints against Ethiopia has been that slavery was still in existence there. This has been rectified by an edict of the emperor setting free the serfs. He also has abolished ancient and unequal taxes on 60 per cent of the land, substituting a fixed and regular payment.

BISHOP John Fisher and Sir Thomas More, who lost their heads four hundred years ago for opposing the marriage of Henry VIII to Anne Boleyn, were canonized by Pope Pius in a magnificent ceremony in St. Peter's, Rome, and about 50,000 persons were in attendance. The chief interest in the proceedings was in the sermon delivered by the pope, in which he urged the audience to pray that England might return to the Roman Catholic faith. The Holy Father said:

"We desire that with your ardent prayers invoking patronage of the new saints you ask of the Lord that which is so dear to our heart—namely: that England, in the words of St. Paul 'meditating the happy consummation which crowned the life' of two martyrs, may 'follow them in their faith' and return to the father's house 'in unity, faith and knowledge of the son of God.'"

"Let those who are still separated from us consider attentively the ancient glories of their church, which were at once the reflection and the increment of the glories of the church of Rome."

BY ADOPTING the resolution of Senator Bennett C. Clark of Missouri, Democrat, the senate gave the NRA life only until April 1, 1936, and considerably curtailed its powers. The expressed wishes of the President and NRA chairman Donald Richberg for a two-year extension with enlarged powers were ignored. The changes called for in the Clark resolution provide for prohibition inclusion of business firms engaged wholly in intrastate commerce under NRA codes or regulations; banning price fixing except in mineral resource industries, and directing the President to revise all codes within thirty days to conform to the provisions of the resolution. Majority leaders in the house were prepared to fight for the two-year extension, but admitted the Clark resolution was likely to prevail there also. In that case, in the opinion of many observers, the NRA will be practically dead.

While the senate was debating the matter, Mr. Richberg told a mass-meeting of NRA workers that the Clark resolution was "complete folly." This aroused the Missourians to wrath. He called it "the most brazen exhibition of impudence on the part of a bureaucratic official which has fallen under my observation during my lifetime," and next day, in a set speech, he told his fellow senators at length just what he thought of Mr. Richberg and "his ambition to be a Mussolini in the United States."

An organization called the industry and business committee for NRA extension was called into action, as were the farmers for AAA, and its head, Ward Cheney, silk manufacturer, announced that a meeting of delegations of industries would be held in Washington May 22.

SENATOR HUEY LONG's resolution for an investigation of Postmaster General Farley was rejected by a vote of 62 to 20, the "Kingfish" being the only Democrat recorded in favor of it. The senate then passed the Norris amendments to the Tennessee Valley Authority act, increasing the TVA's bonding authorization from fifty to one hundred million dollars and protecting its electric power activities from court interference.

Next on the senate program was the Wagner labor relations board bill which its author declared was "responsive to the ominous industrial disturbances of last summer when blood ran freely in the streets and martial law was in the offing."

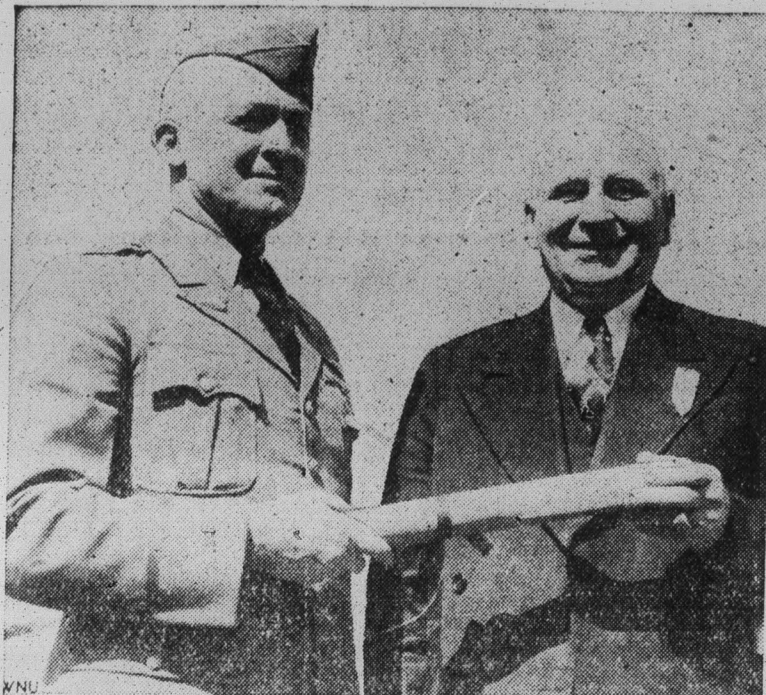

After several amendments designed to limit the power the measure inferentially gives the American Federation of Labor had been rejected, the bill was shoved through by a vote of 63 to 12.

PRESIDENT SMETONA of Lithuania saved from the firing squad four Nazis convicted of plotting to restore Memel to Germany, commuting their sentences to life imprisonment. Germany had been making a terrific row about the case, and was not at all satisfied with Smetona's action, holding that it did not correct the injustice.

GOVERNMENT GETS AIR FIELD

Formal dedication of Hamilton Field, the Army's fine new bombing air base at San Rafael, Marin County, was completed when Governor Merriam of California presented a final deed to the property to Brig. Gen. H. H. Arnold, commanding the First Wing of the G. H. Q. Air Force. Twelve thousand attended the ceremony.

TEAR BOMB HITS STRIKE TRUCK

Tear gas bombs and baseball bats were both used when 60 longshoremen and 200 members of the American Protective League battled at Jackson, Amador County, as the longshoremen brought in food supplies for striking Jackson miners, and jeering between the two factions led to fighting. Photo shows longshoremen as a tear gas bomb landed on their truck.

TROY'S VAULTING QUINTUPLETS

Countess Barbara

Countess Barbara Haugwitz-Reventlow, recently Princess Barbara Mdivani and originally Barbara Hutton, five-and-dime store heiress, looks not one bit pleased as she glares down cameramen who caught her on her first stop in a royal honeymoon, dining in San Francisco.

CALIFORNIA'S PORTION OF U. S. FUNDS IS 22 MILLIONS

WASHINGTON—(WNU)—California is to receive $22,000,393 as its share of the $1,091,802,200 which the President's 22-man allotment board designated to various work projects throughout the United States. The money will be used for construction of highways, roads and streets and grade crossing elimination, and also for various harbor projects in California.

Pulitzer Winner

Arthur B. Waugh, associate editor of the Sacramento Bee, is the author of a series of articles about Nevada Federal judgeships that brought to his newspaper and himself the Pulitzer prize for the most meritorious service performed by an American newspaper during 1934. This is the first time a California newspaper has won the award.

According to reports of the Poultry Producers of Central California, the egg market is improving. Many cities in California have been found to be short of eggs as compared with a year ago.

MOSES KNEW

The demand for rest on the Sabbath goes back to the days of Moses, who was the greatest medical officer of health and sanitary inspector that ever lived. He realized that mankind could not work continuously seven days a week. I agree with that, and that is why I have always been afraid of any serious derogation from the observation of the Lord's day. I know that once you get a serious breach in this respect we may all have to work seven days a week. I certainly do not believe in that doctrine. I would like to have a whole day of recreation also on the day previous to the Lord's day.—F. A. Macquisten, K. C.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

DANNY OVERHEARS SOME TALK

LITTLE by little the shakes left. Danny Meadow Mouse. Not that Danny was no longer afraid. No, indeed! He was very much afraid. He still couldn't see anything for him but to starve or else furnish Billy Mink with a dinner, and of course he didn't want to do either of those things. Certainly not. But having had time to think a little he realized that for the time being he was quite safe. Billy Mink couldn't get at him because that knothole through which he had squeezed into that hollow log was too small for Billy to get even his head in. Had it been Shadow the Weasel instead of Billy Mink—well, it isn't pleasant to think what might have happened in that case. You know, Shadow is much smaller than Billy Mink.

So after awhile Danny stopped shaking. He began to wonder just where Billy Mink was. Billy hadn't made a sound for some time. He could shut his eyes and picture Billy hiding just within good jumping distance of that knothole. That ought to have been enough. But it wasn't. He wanted to know where Billy was. He stole a little nearer the knothole so as to peek out. He was very quiet about it. Yes, indeed, he was very quiet about it. He didn't make the faintest sound.

Just as he got near enough to see out in the moonlight a little he heard a voice. It set that poor little heart of his to golfing pit-a-pat again. It was the voice of Hooty the Owl, and you know there is no one of whom Danny has greater fear than Hooty the Owl. From the sound Danny knew that Hooty was in the top-of-a tree very close by.

"Now, how did he know that I am in here?" thought Danny. "Seems as if everybody I fear knows I am somewhere around, and is looking for me."

Of course this wasn't so, but it is no wonder Danny felt so after all he had been through. Hooty was talking in a low tone. He was talking to Mrs. Hooty. It didn't take Danny long to find that out. Danny listened. He listened with all his might.

"I've been all over the Green Meadows and didn't see a sign of Danny Meadow Mouse," said Hooty. Danny would have laughed at that had it not been for the memory of Billy Mink hiding somewhere just outside.

"What are you watching for here?" continued Hooty. "No one lives around here."

"Sh!" warned Mrs. Hooty. "It may be true that no one lives around here but unless my eyes are crossed and my ears are no longer to be trusted, I both caught a glimpse of and heard some one over near that old log just as I arrived a few minutes ago. When eyes and ears tell me the same thing I take notice. Some one is hidden right down there and I'm going to stay right here, until I find out who it is."

QUESTION BOX
by ED WYNN, The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

A friend of mine, who just came from Los Angeles, in an automobile, said he saw part of a railroad track under water when he was coming through Idaho. He said he heard a train whistle and he realized it was up to him to save the train so he waved a "clothes-pin" and when the engineer saw it he stopped the train. Sounds like applesauce to me, don't it to you?

Yours truly,
E. HAYYE.

Answer: I understand your friend thoroughly. The railroad track was under water, he waved a "clothes-pin" and the engineer stopped the train. Very simple—"clothes-pin" means a wash out on the line.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

We had an argument at our house last night about young men getting married. Some of the folks said that most of the boys who marry when they are very, very young, are usually dark haired. Is that true?

Yours truly,
JENNY RAYTOR.

Answer: It is not true. You will find that boys who marry when they are extremely young are generally all light headed.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I know a man who told me he was going to get married just for the fun of it. He did get married but got a divorce a year and a half later. What was the idea of that?

Truly yours,
AL. E. MONEE.

Answer: He told you he got married for the fun of it. He got married and then got a divorce. That's where the fun comes in.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

One of my neighbors has a son who is now about twenty-two years of age. For the past ten years he has been a lazy, shiftless boy. He ran away from home three weeks ago and yesterday his father got a letter from him say-

Mother's Cook Book

FOR THE CHEESE LOVER

WITH the numerous varieties of cheese on the market—to name them would take a column space, with a word about their composition—one may have something different for every day in the year.

A most tasty dish to serve when something a bit more nourishing than the plain scalloped eggs is required is a few tablespoonfuls of creamy cheese added to the hot eggs; stir until well mixed.

Serve the sweet, juicy early cabbage cooked whole, with the hard center removed, then cut into pie-shaped pieces on a chop plate; serve with a white sauce to which a cupful of finely minced cheese has been added. Be sure the cheese is well melted before serving. This makes a most tasty and attractive as well as a nourishing dish.

The cheese supper dish has been given so often that it seems as if every one should have the recipe, yet here it is again for those who have never seen it:

Cheese Supper Dish.

Spread stale bread with butter and place in a shallow baking dish as many slices as will be needed. Cover each slice thickly with finely minced rich cheese and when enough is prepared pour over a custard mixture, using two eggs and a pint of milk with salt to season. Bake in the oven at a low heat. The dish will be like a fluffy omelet, most attractive and appetizing. Serve hot.

Cheese Roll.

To one cake of cream cheese softened with cream add one cupful of good American cheese grated, a dash of red pepper, one-half cupful of chopped stuffed olives. Make into a roll and decorate with thin slices of stuffed olives. Serve on a dainty plate with a cheese knife.

In choosing cheese for cookery be sure that you buy a rich one that will melt without becoming stringy. Overcooking will make most cheese stringy, so great care should be used when heat is applied. To test cheese for richness take a bit in the mouth and press it with the tongue to the roof of the mouth. If it melts easily you may be sure it is well ripened and rich cheese.

American Federation of Labor

The American Federation of Labor was organized in 1881. Until 1886, it was known as the Federation of Trades and Labor Unions of the United States and Canada. At that time there was no executive council and president as there was after 1886. There was a president and vice president of a legislative committee. Samuel Gompers served as president of this committee from 1881 to 1886. He was then elected president of the American Federation of Labor and remained its president until his death, with the exception of 1895.

HOMES IN NORTH CONSTRUCTED OF STEEL AND CORK

Two portable dwellings of steel frames and corkboard walls and roofs went to Alaska to replace homes destroyed in the Nome fire, a few months ago, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The experiment has shown that this type of construction, in which the insulation is the structure instead of an addition to the structure, is admirably suited to cold regions in particular.

The material for the homes was cut to size at the factory, the parts were numbered and the houses were sent by boat to Nome where, despite adverse weather conditions, the dwellings were erected in ten days.

It is estimated the cost of such construction is about one-fourth more than for ordinary frame structures, but to offset this, a saving of fifteen per cent, or more in fuel is claimed.

In addition to complete insulation the cork and steel homes are fire resistant, vermin proof, immune to dry rot and impervious to moisture. The houses can be knocked down, moved and reassembled easily if the steel frames are bolted to timbers as a base. The corkboard is squeeze-fitted between the steel angles and secured with wire.

Lumber is used over the corkboard roof and on this is laid composite roll roofing. Each Alaskan home is eighteen by thirty feet, sufficient for four small rooms, and each structure required two and one-half tons of steel and 5,500 feet, board measure, of corkboard.

This type of construction permits optional finish, inside and outside, with stucco, brick veneer, sheet iron or stone as outside choices, and plaster, veneer panels or other finish for the interior. Provision is made easily for inside plumbing and wiring.

Standard specifications call for steel doors and window sashes with provision for storm windows. Floors are of wood.

Egypt's Ten Plagues

The popular notion is that Egypt suffered seven plagues, when in reality the country suffered ten. They were the turning of the Nile into blood, covering the land with frogs, turning the dust into lice, sending swarms of flies, killing the cattle by a murrain, afflicting the Egyptians with boils, raining fire and hail, covering the land with locusts, covering the land with a thick darkness for three days, and the destruction of the first born of man and beast.

Russian "Justice"

Sherwood Eddy, who has visited Russia six times under the existing government, says that no profession is made in that country of settling disputes upon a basis of absolute or of abstract justice. If the offender is a poor worker he is given a light sentence, if he is an intelligent or privileged citizen who should have known better, he is given a heavier punishment, but if he is a member of the Communist party he is given the maximum penalty of the law.

CALIFORNIA—"THE LAND OF PROMISE"

The dawn of June reminds us of pleasant anticipations ahead. June brings us the fruition of many joys and new hopes, because first, it is graduation month and the June bride in all her charm, adorned for her husband.

All of these happy events are more abundant in California, naturally, because this is the land of promise, where everyone gathers to find the most in life. From every source there is California comment going on. It has been argued and proven that no other place abounds in greater romance, resources and attractiveness and a promise for a life of prosperity and happiness, than the Golden State of California.

June in California also reminds us of summer and vacation, with her bulky kit of many more anticipations, and what a promising season there is ahead! This is for all who appropriate their time and substance to the best advantage. Right planning can make every day a holiday for every human being, provide there are not too many militant grievances gnawing at the memory vitals.

Here in Ocean Beach there is fishing, hiking, motoring, sun and sea bathing, picnics, camping jaunts and opportunity for family bliss in a score of ways. The trouble with most of us, we want to seek more pleasure than anything else. The right balance in living is to be able to carry the memories of an outing into our work-a-day realms. Why, work can be included in the holiday program. When it is, then, surely every day is a holiday and its benefits are everlasting.

Clean, truthful advertising pays big results.

The laws of the Medes and Persians were considered the most iron-clad and without reserve, but nature's laws are the oldest, greatest and more enduring. Man-made laws are defective and have their weak points. Nature's laws are infallible. No man-made law can overcome the laws of nature. We attempt to restrict production to better conditions, but it never fails; we must produce more to get more. We have tried it again and again without success. The recent restricted rules on wheat is a good illustration. When navigation reopened again this spring on Lake Superior over 25 million bushels of wheat were rushed in from Canada to meet the demands in the United States. By comparison, the United States had a surplus of 900 million bushels five years ago to Canada's 500 million bushels. After all, this is not so much an age of want as it is an age for distribution of plenty.

Uncle Sam has added another of the "seven wonder of the New World" to his family of National parks—the celebrated Mammoth Cave in Kentucky, which also includes 32,500 acres of surrounding territory which contain other various subterranean wonders. This old cave has been the marvel of antiquity since its discovery ages ago. It has an ariel diameter of about ten miles with passage ways under the ground of over 100 miles. With the explorations many mysterious freaks are known, such as chambers, pits, domes and underground rivers. The main cave is 3 miles long and from 40 to 175 feet wide with a ceiling height of from 40 to 125 feet. One large oval dome is 541 feet long, 287 feet wide and 125 feet high. While this is about the rarest sight known, yet not all sight-seers care to visit it, because of their timidity.

We are naturally, by force of habit, envious of people whose background of reading has enabled them to take a leading and confident part in many conversations. This is culture, but few realize the painstaking effort which it has required through years of plodding and patient study. After all, hundreds of students in search of knowledge have made heroic accomplishments by devoting spare time appropriately given to reading good, instructive books and periodicals with a devoted friendship toward the authors who are chosen men of letters. Amazing riches are found in good books. As a reminder for the approaching summer, why not resolve to turn your spare moments to storing up helpful facts that will lead to the higher and nobler things which we should covet?

Anger and fear are the twin demons of today, though they are vastly wide in their scope of attack. Anger inflames war, but fear is a trembling by-product as the result of war-threatening propaganda. Nothing will cure either, until we rid the mind of this nightmare of hostilities; and when this is accomplished the crime wave and personal selfishness should lessen, for they both emanate from that one potential public enemy called war. If we could quit talking war and devote our conference of nation to aggressive, upbuilding subjects, international relations would soon take on a different aspect for social justice, clean politics and real neighborliness. What an asset to economic progress this would be!

Children's Day will be celebrated nationally next Sunday, when all the attention for emphasizing and promoting child life, will be uppermost. We look on Children's Day as a reminder that some day they will be in our places when old age relegates the parents to the rear. The most important object of Children's Day, however, is its missionary spirit of giving of our pennies and dimes for the evangelization of the world. Every child is taught the need of giving and the spirit of love for the poor and neglected in foreign fields who are perishing today.

The population of the United States is given as 141,574,000; of this number 6,158,000 belongs to our own beloved state of California. Notwithstanding the Eastern brickbats flung at us, we still continue to grow. There is a constant flow into the state, and fortunately they are not all, the kind that helps. Others, however, come here to reestablish themselves. Yet so great is the power of California to assimilate new population, so varied are its opportunities, that there are few whom California cannot ultimately turn into useful citizens.

NATURAL FORCES AID BUSINESS RECOVERY

By R. S. HECHT
President American Bankers Association

ALTHOUGH, as official studies of business conditions show, business is still far from having struck its full stride, nevertheless,

I believe that it is undoubtedly true that the natural economical processes which have always brought the nation out of a slump are now and have been for some time steadily at work laying the foundations for more active and normal business conditions.

I believe that there is growing a broader public perception that the people of this country must make their own prosperity and not wait for the Government at Washington to make it for them. In other words, normal economic vigor and vitality of the United States is slowly but inevitably bringing a return of natural business recovery.

The Fundamental Cure

Like a doctor, the administration can help nature. But the fundamental healing processes will come from natural causes and not from political remedies. Despite the slackening of business now apparent, despite expressions of disappointment we hear from various quarters, nevertheless I am confident that these fundamental healing processes, if not spectacular, are none the less surely at work.

Gradually our business leaders are showing greater confidence in the future and are assuming a more forward looking position. I firmly believe that if we will make up our minds to replace fear psychology with confidence psychology the results will fully justify such a new attitude.

BANKERS' ASSOCIATION STIMULATES ADVERTISING

The American Bankers Association's Advertising Department reports rapid progress of the use by banks of the informative bank newspaper advertising prepared by it for members to assist them in rebuilding public confidence and good will in their communities.

The central theme of this advertising service deals with the "essential line of economic and social service that all sound banking inherently renders the depositor and the public," the report says, showing that "It is not banking laws which make banking useful and safe, but that fundamentally it is honesty and skill in management under private initiative."

The Advertising Department is supplying about a thousand members of the association with newspaper and other advertising material. The newspaper material totals about 50,000 advertisements annually. The growth of the work of the department is shown by the following figures: On September 1, 1934, the number of banks being served regularly each month was 623. The total number on April 1, 1935, was 924, an increase of 301 regular subscribers, or 49 per cent in a period of seven months.

WARS ON BANK ROBBERS

National Bankers Association
Pressing Active Steps to Protect Members—
Losses Cut

Imprisonment or death of many desperate bank criminals the past year has brought no appreciable reduction in attacks on banks, James E. Baum, in charge of the American Bankers Association Protective Department, has reported to his organization.

In the six months ended February 28, 1935, he says, banks were targets for 169 daylight holdups and 40 night burglaries. He added that although banks that are not members number only about half those enrolled in the association, they suffered a far greater rate of attack, namely, 51 per cent of all the bank robberies committed during the period.

Losses Show Decrease

During the period under report, bank burglars and bandits exacted tribute amounting to $943,551 compared with losses totaling $1,257,000 a year ago, he said. This reduction in losses is attributed to the time-locking restrictions and other limitations in the exposure of surplus cash imposed last year by underwriters and several bank supervisory authorities.

The sharp reduction in the material loss of money and securities resulting from bank robbery this year was "overshadowed by the killing of 2 bank employees, one bystander and 5 arresting officers," and since last August bank robbery also cost the lives of 15 criminals and caused physical injuries to 10 bank employees, 12 bystanders, 9 arresting officers and 8 bandits, a total of 62 casualties.

Investigations by the association's agents resulted in the arrest of 36 forgers, 42 bandits and one burglar, or 79 of the 141 bank criminals reported as being apprehended during the period.

The guests were: Misses Jane Coolidge, Betty Bishop, Joyce Badger, Margaret McCarthy, Olive Walker, Zandra Lewis, Mary Hayes, Ilene Bogue and Judy Park. The party was chaperoned by Mesdames Judson Bishop and Merrill Coolidge.

When business is lagging is the time to spend more money for advertising. Business men who advertise feel a depression much less than those who cut down expenses by cutting down advertising.

Annual Meeting The First Church of Christ Scientist, Boston, Mass.

BOSTON, Mass., June 3.—A call to renewed activity in the daily application of Christian Science was issued today at the annual meeting of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, by The Christian Science Board of Directors.

Church officers in their reports divulged marked growth of the movement throughout the world.

George Wendell Adams, speaking as chairman of the Board of Directors, stressed the need for interest not only in problems of individuals, "but also in the general welfare of the world. Truth and Love hold guard over the whole world as well as over the minutest occupant of it," the directors said.

"In these days of unrest, with rumors of vital disagreements among nations, we should turn often in prayerful expectancy that nation shall not rise up against nation, but that Love, God, will be acknowledged as supreme in the affairs of men. In reality, men and nations do not envy and hate each other; because they have one heavenly Father they respect and love each other."

The election of A. Barry Bacon as the new president of The Mother Church was announced. Mr. Bacon succeeds Dr. John M. Brewer, Associate Professor at the Harvard Graduate School of Education.

New readers elected to serve in The Mother Church for the next three years are Ralph B. Scholfield and Miss Florence Siever Middaugh. Edward L. Ripley and Ezra W. Palmer, both of Brookline, Mass., were re-elected treasurer and clerk of the Church, respectively.

Mr. Scholfield, who will conduct church services, was born at Howden, Yorkshire, England. He was educated at Eton College, where he first experienced the healing influence of Christian Science. Entering business in London, he worked with a firm of marine insurance underwriters at Lloyd's. During the World War he served as captain of infantry with a British regiment.

Miss Middaugh, the second reader, is a native of Colorado and was educated in the schools of Denver. She has been a student of Christian Science for more than twenty years, and a member of The Mother Church since 1918; she has had membership with branch churches in Denver and in Los Angeles, California, and has served as soloist in Christian Science churches during sixteen years, six of which were with The Mother Church.

Mr. Bacon, the new president, was born in Pontiac, Michigan, but when quite young his parents moved to Washington, D. C., where he spent his boyhood and received his education. Entering the retail business world, he located in Boston, where he has steadily advanced and is now president of one of the oldest specialty department stores in New England.

He became interested in Christian Science shortly after coming to Boston through the severe illness of a member of his family. In the year 1900 he was made a member of The Mother Church, and has served it actively and faithfully. He is also president and director of First Church of Christ, Scientist, Marshfield, Massachusetts.

In his address Mr. Bacon asserted the modern need for accepting the Bible axiom, "By their fruits ye shall know them."

"During the past four years of the so-called depression," he said, "when the whole world has struggled under unemployment, lack of want, and woe, Christian Science has come to the rescue of many, and through the application of this Science, they have been healed of erroneous conditions. In the midst of this period the building of our new Publishing House was wisely undertaken. Thereby many people were given employment, much money was put into circulation, and an example of courage and perseverance in right-doing was presented with resulting benefit."

BAPTIST CHURCH SERVICES

A children's day program will be presented in the Bible school at 9:45 a. m. Mrs. A. Newville will direct the program.

In the morning hour of worship at 11 o'clock the pastor will speak on the subject "Discovering Divine Resources". Following the sermon a number of persons will be baptised.

The young Peoples' society will meet at 6:30 p. m. Miss Jane Karl will lead the meeting.

A song service will be held at 7:30 and the pastor's sermon topic will be "God's Remedy For World Trouble." You are cordially invited to these services.

Lutheran Mission

"The Risen Saviour's Promise To Send the Holy Spirit," will be the subject of the sermon on this coming Pentecost Sunday at the 10:45 service. Come and let the Holy Spirit enter in, and in you a new life begin. This is a festival day in which every man should be found in his church. "The First Pentecost," will be the lesson treated in every department of the Sunday school. That Jesus sent the Holy Ghost to His disciples, and that the Holy Spirit works repentance and faith will be the thoughts brought out in the various departments.

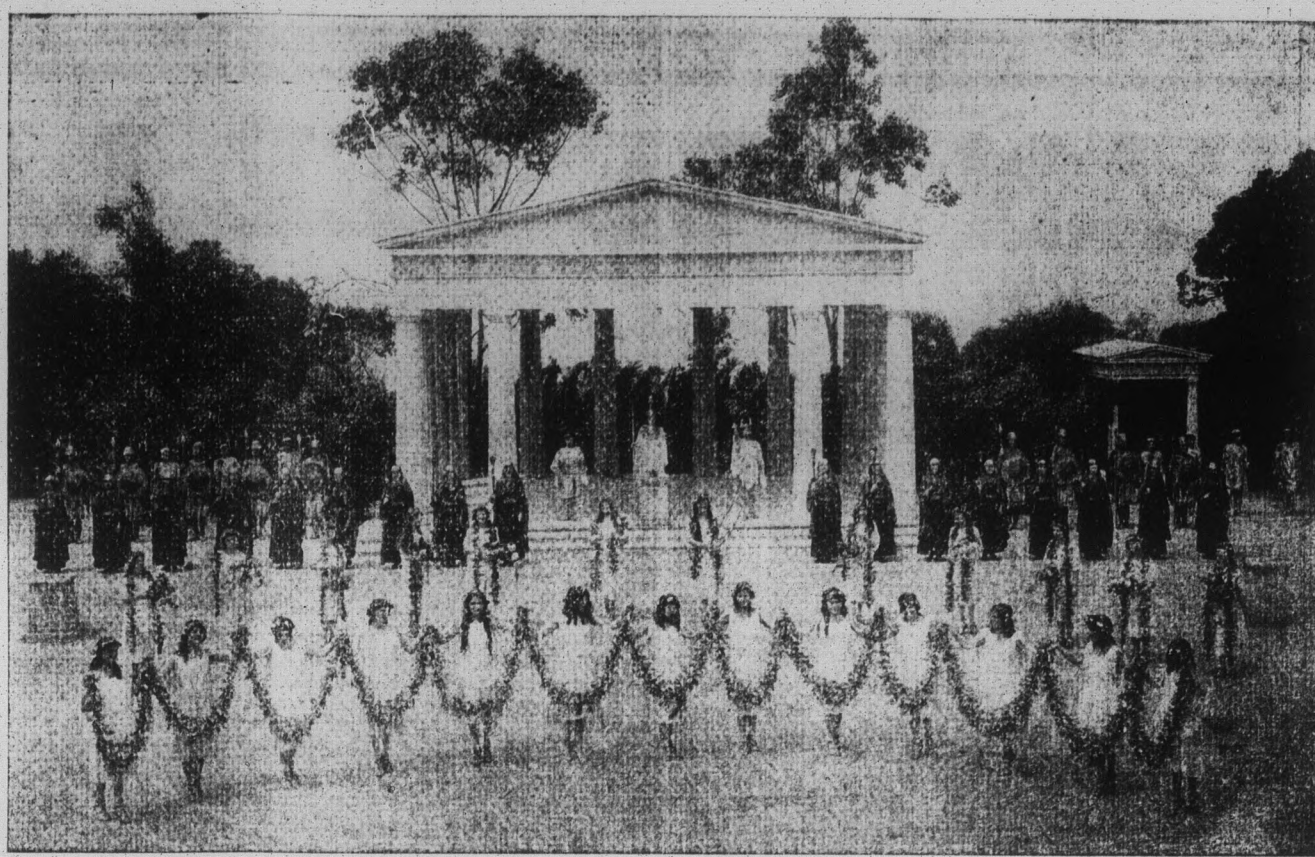

All Lutherans are most cordially invited to attend these hours of worship on this important festival day, as well as the general public.

Finale from "The Eumenides" of Aeschylus in the Greek Theatre, Point Loma.

Point Loma will be brought to the attention of thousands of high school boys and girls thruout the country during their most impressionable years in two school textbooks recently issued by the well-known publishing house of Allyn and Bacon of Boston. The latest of these works, just off the press, is called "European Backgrounds", and is a pupils' workbook to accompany West and West's

"New World's Foundations in the Old". The book illustrates its chapter on "The Glory of Athens" with a large cut entitled "A Modern Performance of a Greek Drama of Aeschylus"—a scene from Theosophical University's production of "The Eumenides". This ancient mystery-drama was given a number of times in the Greek theatre at Point Loma under the direction of the late Theosophical Leader, Katherine Tingley.

It will be recalled that early in the century, Madame Tingley declared from the platform of the old Fischer opera house, later purchased by her and renamed the Iris theatre that San Diego was destined to become "The Athens of America". She worked hard to bring about the consummation of her prediction. The Theosophical institute at Point Loma is a lasting monument to her genius.

The other work featuring Point Loma issued by Allyn and Bacon is a work of some 800 pages on science entitled "Our Environment: How We Use and Control It", by Wood and Carpenter (Revised). It reproduces a beautiful photograph of the open-air Greek theatre at Point Loma and comments on its fine acoustics

FRIDAY, JUNE 14, 7:30

The G. de Purucker lodge of Ocean Beach cordially invites you to a lecture to be held at the lodge home at 1940 Abbott street, between Newport and Santa Monica, Friday June 14, at 7:30 p. m.

Speaker: Iverson L. Harris, regional vice president, Point Loma, and a member of the Headquarters staff.

Subject: Signposts of the Sages.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES
"God the Only Cause and Creator" Is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon on Sunday in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass. The Golden Text is from the Acts: "Known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world."

A Scriptural citation in the Lesson-Sermon presents these verses from Paul's epistle to the Romans: "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out! For who hath known the mind of the Lord? or who hath been his counsellor? . . . For of him, and through him, and to him, are all things: to whom be glory for ever. Amen."

One of the correlative passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, states, "Spiritually to understand that there is but one creator, God, unfolds all creation, confirms the Scriptures, brings the sweet assurance of no parting, no pain, and of men deathless and perfect and eternal."

SYNOPSIS

Matt Kearney, young American living in London, says good-by to his sister Eileen, on board the Wallaroo bound for Colombo. The Wallaroo is conveying $2,000,000 in gold to Australia. On his way home Kearney meets Inspector Dawson Haig, of Scotland Yard, very much in love with Eileen. Haig is convinced opium is concealed in Jo Lung's warehouse. Called to other duty, he delegates Kearney, with Detective Norwich, to visit the place and find out what he can.

CHAPTER II

A heavy wooden gate, set in a high, old brick wall, did not look very promising. Partially defaced by time and weather, the name "Jo Lung" might still with difficulty be read thereupon. Just beside the inscription was an electric bell push, and to this Detective Sergeant Norwich applied his finger.

"Don't forget the American accent, sir," he whispered.

"I can't," Kearney replied. "So they tell me here."

This cur-de-sac was curiously quiet, although its blind end terminated very near to the river bank. Here, the fog was thick again. Kearney conjured up a picture of the Wallaroo, lying far downstream, and of a cozy stateroom. Eileen would be in bed now, propped up, reading. He hoped she was happy. He was very fond of Eileen.

Suddenly a small door, set in one wing of the greater one, opened quite silently inwards. The light of an electric lamp of that pattern carried by the police shone into their faces. Behind the lamp, indistinguishable in the darkness, appeared a stooping figure, shadowy.

"What you want, please?" asked a soft, monotonous voice.

Peering hard, Matt Kearney made out that the speaker wore a dark blue turban. The doorkeeper was not, as one might have anticipated, a Chinaman, but an Arab bowwab.

"Mr. Jo Lung," Norwich replied distinctly. "I have brought him a customer from the United States."

The bowwab turned light upon the speaker's face, and said:

"I don't see you here before," he commented.

"Maybe not," Norwich returned.

"But I come from Mr. Bernardson. Look at this."

He held out a card. Bony brown fingers grasped it and placed it close before the light of the lantern; then:

"All right," said the guardian of the gateway. "Please come in."

The two stepped into a little courtyard. The Arab proved to be a gaunt man with a lined and peck-marked face, sunken eyes and an ominous expression.

They crossed to a corner of the yard, mounted four stone steps, and entered a dimly lighted passage, having a window with an iron grating overlooking the courtyard. The place was stuffy and full of cigarette smoke. It was evidently the sanctum of the Arab night porter.

"Don't Forget the American Accent, Sir," He Whispered.

"Please wait," said the bowwab, leaving them together in the dimly lighted room. Shuffling footsteps died away in some dark place beyond, and Kearney was about to speak when Norwich shook his head urgently.

Standing there in an oppressive hush, a long way off in the building, Kearney heard a sound.

Although at first he failed to identify it, immediately he knew that it was horrible. It was a very high sound, between a piping and a squeal; higher than the note of a rat. It was, paradoxically, so shrill as to be nearly inaudible.

Then, suddenly, he knew of what it reminded him... the amplified squeak of a bat! It was chilling; terrifying; in some way—unclean.

He exchanged a rapid glance with Norwich; and Norwich stood like a man petrified.

"For God's sake! What was it?" Kearney whispered.

"I can't imagine, sir. . . . Ssh! Some one coming!"

"It was like . . . laughter. . . ."

The emporium of Jo Lung occupied all the rooms on two floors of a rambling old building, eight or nine rooms in all, and each one literally crammed with treasures. At times Kearney imagined that the covered-in ways of old Damascus lay just around the next turning; that the Street Called Straight, and not Limehouse Causeway, adjoined this wonder-land. On entering other rooms, he was transported to the Seraglio palace, and thought that he stood in the treasury of the sultans.

Only the manner in which these priceless items were displayed served to dissipate such illusions. They were piled carelessly upon rough, trestle tables.

Here were lacquer cabinets, chests, and caskets, antique and modern; each one a choice piece. Damascened swords, Venetian goblets, whole services of Ming porcelain; prayer carpets of a quality seldom seen outside a museum; a collection of books in exquisite bindings; a great quantity of antique silver.

A highly civilized and well-dressed Greek did the honors. "Mr. Jo Lung is unfortunately away," he explained, to Norwich. "But if I can help, I am at your service. No doubt," turning to Kearney, who was endeavoring to hide his bewilderment, "you have a definite idea what you are seeking?"

Kearney conquered his astonishment. He endeavored to recall Dawson Haig's instructions. Jo Lung was the biggest "fence"—or dealer in stolen goods—in all London! Surprise visits had never yet caught him napping. This was a new move. Detective Sergeant Norwich had memorized a long list of stolen jewelry—principally foreign; and their job was to try to identify even one item in Jo's emporium. On this, Haig could act . . . and the cases of opium lay in an adjoining yard!

"My friend, Mr. Bronsen, has several commissions," said Norwich. "Matt Kearney was 'Mr. Bronsen.' (But mostly colored gems.)"

"Yes," Kearney broke in. "I'm commissioned by a New York client to complete a collection of sapphires."

"Sapphires?" The Greek raised heavy eyebrows. "I fear I am unfortunate. If Mr. Jo Lung were here he might be able to help you. But to the best of my knowledge we have few sapphires in stock at present. They are not," he smiled slightly, "very profitable just now. However, you shall see."

They passed along a corridor, went down three naked wooden steps and picked a way through what seemed to be a collection of lamps—lamps of perforated brass, of silver, and of gold; lamps from Arabia, from China, and from Japan.

Detective Sergeant Norwich was all eyes.

They entered a room resembling a small shop, and the Greek, stepping behind a narrow counter, pulled out a tray from beneath and opened it for the visitors' inspection.

It was as he did so that the almost insupportable silence began to bear down upon Kearney. The treasure-house of Jo Lung was the most silent place he had ever known in the heart of a city. Its silence was uncanny. . . .

"Unless Mr. Lung has others in the safe," the Greek said, "these are the only colored gems in stock at present."

Kearney, resting his eyes upon the jewels, suppressed an exclamation in the nick of time. . . .

The tray was arranged with some artistic care, and in its center, under the harsh, unshaded lamp which the Greek had switched on, blazed a group of amazingly matched rare opals. Kearney clenched his teeth and bent lower, peering down.

Here lay evidence to justify a search of Jo Lung's premises! Beyond any possibility of mistake, this was the "Dakenham necklace"—the famous rope of opals which his Aunt Hilma, Lady Dakenham, had taken with her upon the ill-fated voyage of the American yacht, Miss Minnesota, lost with all hands in the Persian gulf, less than a year before!

Yet—a query leaped to his brain—was it evidence?

"You are admiring the opals?" The Greek's voice seemed to come from a great distance.

Kearney pulled himself together. "Yes," he said, and met the unblinking gaze of the man's dark eyes. "If I were buying opals, I should buy these."

"You would be wise. But you know Mr. Lung's methods of business?"

"Yes. Even if I wanted to buy, I haven't the cash!" He was cool enough now. He added: "These sapphires are indifferent. I'm sorry."

The Greek replaced the tray, and: "Perhaps you will honor us with a visit, Mr. Bronsen, next time you visit England," he suggested. "Special requirements such as yours cannot always be met at short notice."

He led them to another room. "What have you here?" Norwich asked curiously—"in these cases?"

Kearney was slightly ahead when the Greek paused and looked back as Kearney observed a little memo-book, bound in green leather, lying upon the first step. . . .

Without attracting attention, he stooped quickly, picked it up, and slipped it in his pocket. Here, perhaps, was evidence!

In the act of turning to rejoin Norwich, who was examining a massive sallow—something—a slight sound—prompted Kearney to glance across the shadow-haunted expanse of the big room below.

It opened directly out of the lobby of the bowwab and contained miscellaneous bulky exhibits; a vast place in which only that one light was burning. His dim reflection touched a distant landing.

And on this landing a woman stood! She was encased, mummy-like, in a long, clinging fur coat of what Kearney took to be brown ermine. Her blue-black hair was brushed straight back from her brow; her small, chiseled features resembled a pale cameo, but her lips were poppy red. Unfathomable eyes were represented only by straight, nearly horizontal shadows; and one singularly long, white, ghastly hand rested on her hip.

He stared—stared again . . . and the apparition had gone!

Had she been watching him? Had she seen him pick up the book? Or had she any real existence at all?—was she a product of his excited imagination? . . .

In a soundproof room, well but simply furnished as an office, a man sat before a large desk. The room was in darkness except for a shaded lamp upon this desk. Near to it, back against the wall, was a mechanism which at first glance one would have taken for a radio set. The seated man, his bowed back to the room, was engaged in manipulating this apparatus; and suddenly, as a result of manipulation, a voice cut into the silence:

"I hope to see you again on your next visit, Mr. Bronsen," said the voice. It was that of the Greek.

"Sure thing. I'll be here." That was Kearney.

There came a creaking sound of footsteps and the slam of a door. The visitors had gone.

The man at the table disconnected the apparatus and swung about in his revolving chair. A soft black hat lay upon the carpet, with a fur-lined overcoat having a deep astrakhan collar. This man's skin resembled the peel of a dried lemon; his jet-black hair was stretched back from a receding forehead. Half-closed eyes were like slits in the yellow face, and his lips were red and beautifully formed, their redness accentuated by a small, black, bow-shaped mustache which arched above them.

It was a smiling face, but something in it inspired terror in the man upon whom those half-closed eyes were turned. This latter was a stalwart Chinaman, moderately well dressed in European clothes, who might, at some time, have been a sailor. He had the mask-like, immobile features of his race and calling. Only by a slight movement of small, sinewy hands, did he display his discomfort.

Slowly, the slit-like eyes in the yellow face of the one who watched him opened and the red lips smiled.

Fully opened, those eyes were terrifying. Some might have found it hard to define wherein their terror lay. Except that they seemed to be super-normally bright, they were, in an animal fashion, the eyes. Their dreadful quality consisted in one simple difference: their whites were really white—whereas that part of the normal human eye is invariably tinted. The result, being phenomenal, was horrifying.

The man in the revolving chair spoke slowly, and his voice, like his eyes, was super-normal. He was a big man for a Chinese, and fleshy . . . but he spoke in a key in which Caruso sang!

"What did I tell you, my friend? Your men's soul said, 'It is business.' I said, 'It is a plot.'"

"I was considering Excellency's interests."

"And this," continued the flute-like voice, "is how you consider them. You admit a disguised police officer and a stranger, tonight—tonight, above all other nights?"

"I believed—"

"I never accept excuses. Ah!"

A muffled bell rang.

"Open the door. Here is Polodos."

The Chinaman opened a batz-covered door, admitting the immaculate Greek. As he entered:

"You were wrong, Jo Lung," he said to the one who had opened for him.

He turned to the man at the desk. "Excellency was right. The card was certainly obtained by fraud. Of one man I can say nothing, but the other was a detective."

"Ah!" came the reed voice. And the speaker stood up, his eyes half-closing again. "I am sure of it. . . . I was listening to every word." He pointed to the apparatus on the table.

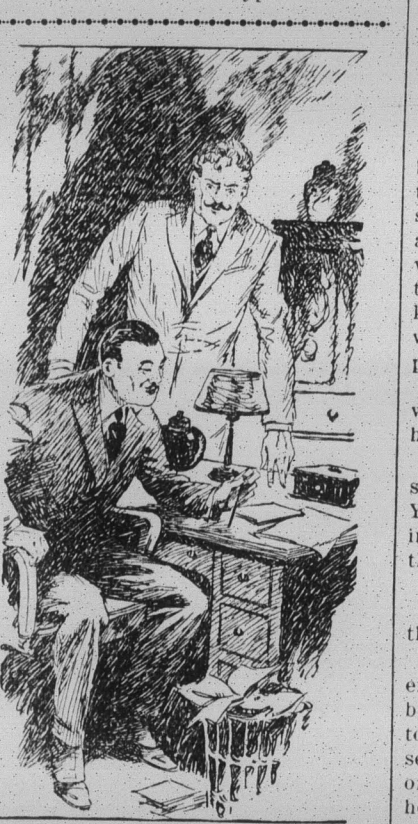

"No harm has been done, my lord," the Greek continued. "I was cautious. It is regrettable, but it was remedied."

The baleful glance of those half-shut eyes was directed again upon Jo Lung.

"Tonight, it is more than regrettable," the reed voice declared. "This is the second mistake of a disastrous day. The first was the shipment of valuable goods in the Wallaroo. My plans, my careful plans—to be destroyed by fools!"

"Notice of change came so late. . . . The dim bell rang again. Polodos opened the padded door, and a woman came in.

Her blue-black hair gleamed like a raven's wing. Her long dark eyes were ever so slightly oblique, and she had a petulant red mouth, small and delicately chiseled features, and held her head disdainfully high. Her long, slender neck rose above the collar of the brown ermine coat, which she held tightly about her in a manner to have reminded a critical observer of the once admired Rossetti type. Her complexion was peach-like but dark, and silk-clad ankles and tiny shoes peeping beneath the fringe of a black lace frock had a dainty and patrician elegance.

She was imperially petite, alluring yet menacing. The Greek and Jo Lung stepped aside deferentially as:

"Yu'an," she said, and the voice of this cold woman had a deep, warm, curssing note, "who were those men? I saw them from the stair."

"Come in and shut the door," the Chinaman replied. "Did either of them see you?"

"No, I don't think so."

"Do you—suspect them?"

Polodos solicitously passed her a card. "This is the introduction they brought, my lady, and Mr. Bernardson had advised us that they were coming."

The woman took the card, glanced at it, and tossed it onto a side table.

"Are you ready to leave, Yu'an?"

"I have a telephone call to make to the Wallaroo," he replied. "There has been much bungling. I must speak to the doctor."

He stooped, dipping his hand, a plump, waxen hand with tapering fingers, into an inside pocket of the heavy fur coat which lay at his feet. Suddenly he glanced up, the china white of his eyes glaring.

"I removed my coat as I entered the warehouse," he said, "and carried it here. I have dropped my notebook." Something in those words broke through the high disdain of the woman watching him. Where the eyes of Yu'an had gleamed whitely, hers, in opening, grew black as though the iris distended.

"Your notebook?"

Yu'an, clutching the arms of the chair, continued to watch her, his drooping lids slowly, slowly covering those ominous eyes. The others were watching her also.

"I said so. It contains . . . our death warrants!"

The woman clasped her slender throat—a curious gesture. "Ah," she cried—"I am blind! It must be! I saw one of those men pick up a small notebook! It was like yours—it must have been yours! On the steps from the Silver room."

Followed a moment of tense silence. All were watching the Greek.

"You saw this, Polodos?" Yu'an whispered in flute-like tones.

The Greek was very pale. "I had stepped back. I remember turning up the light on the stair."

Yu'an, his eyes now apparently quite closed, turned in the woman's direction. "Open the door, go down to those stairs, quickly, and tell me if you deceived yourself."

Some, but not all her disdain deserting her, the woman turned, opened the door, and swept out of the office.

"Jo Lung," Yu'an continued, "follow her. Your life and mine depend upon what I tell you. If those pigs have found and taken that notebook, our necks are hung upon a silken thread. There is fog—but they must be overtaken. That book must be back here, upon this table, within an hour."

Jo Lung moved silently towards the door.

"Two men," Yu'an added. "All shall go—"

"And send for the Adder. . . . As Jo Lung disappeared, Yu'an turned his apparently closed eyes in the direction of Polodos. At mention of that name—"the Adder"—the Greek's face had grown clammy with perspiration. It trickled down from his hair into his thick eyebrows.

And Yu'an began to laugh. He did not show his teeth in laughter. His red lips merely seemed to thicken—and his eyes closed as he laughed—high hideous squeals, like the amplified note of a bat. . . .

Kearney felt a tremendous sense of relief when he found himself out again in the narrow lane. Even the fog seemed friendly. Dimly to his ears came a sound of voices which seemed to proceed from the little courtyard they had left behind. Apparently Norwich did not notice these sounds.

It was good to be free of that strange building, with its silence out of which the breathing of hidden watchers seemed to come; its ghastly emptiness, as of a place unoccupied, deserted, yet which he knew by virtue of some extra sense to be illusive. The Arab doorkeeper, the Greek—and that strange woman—had not been the only occupants of Jo Lung's emporium that night.

There were others—many others, watching, listening. He knew it—he had felt it all the time.

By virtue of some mutual understanding, Kearney and the Scotland Yard man paced along to the neighboring street in unbroken silence. But, the corner turned:

"Those opals!" Kearney began.

"I knew you had spotted something there!"

"I had. You've got your case clearly enough if they don't dispose of them before tomorrow. Those opals belonged to Lady Dakenham, who was lost at sea ten months ago! How in the name of all that's wonderful did Jo Lung get hold of them?"

"H'm!" said the Scotland Yard man, and his tone betokened disappointment. "There's no case in that, sir. I suppose they must have been washed ashore. Where did the accident happen?"

"In the Red sea or the Persian gulf!" Detective Sergeant Norwich laughed. "Outside our beat!" he said.

"Then you mean there's nothing you can act upon?"

"I'm afraid there isn't," Norwich confessed. "Everything in the place is of number one quality. But there was nothing that I definitely recognized. In fact, if you ask me, we were spotted!"

"Do you think so?"

"I'm positive!"

"Yes," Kearney murmured. "I'm afraid we have wasted our time. Something annoying in view of the fact—unless we can get hold of a wandering taxi—that I have a long, foggy journey ahead."

Norwich laughed again. "Hard luck, sir," he said. "There's a cozy fire, an armchair, and a pair of slippers waiting for me at Stockwell. But my orders are to report back to Leman Street."

"That being the case," said Kearney cheerfully, as they groped out onto Commercial Road East, "we part company. I shall head towards the station. I'm calling Haig as soon as I get back."

Kearney peered through swirling mist along perhaps the unloudest thoroughfare in all London. Not a figure moved as far as his sight could pierce the fog. He had done nothing to help Dawson Haig, but certainly he had secured some unique "copy." He glanced back. Norwich had disappeared.

He had gone ten or fifteen paces when suddenly he pulled up again. . . . A sound had reached him—a short, muffled scream. Stockwell he stood, and listened.

Dim, distant noises reached him, the rumble of remote lorries; that muted booming which is the lifeblood of the port of London pumping through its many arteries; fog signals. He could detect no footstep—no other sound. . . . It was close upon midnight. He pulled up again as he saw two things of interest: one, definite, the other, perhaps chimerical. Either unpleasant memories of the establishment of Jo Lung still haunted him, or he had seen a curiously small, active figure dart into the shadow of a doorway not twenty paces behind!

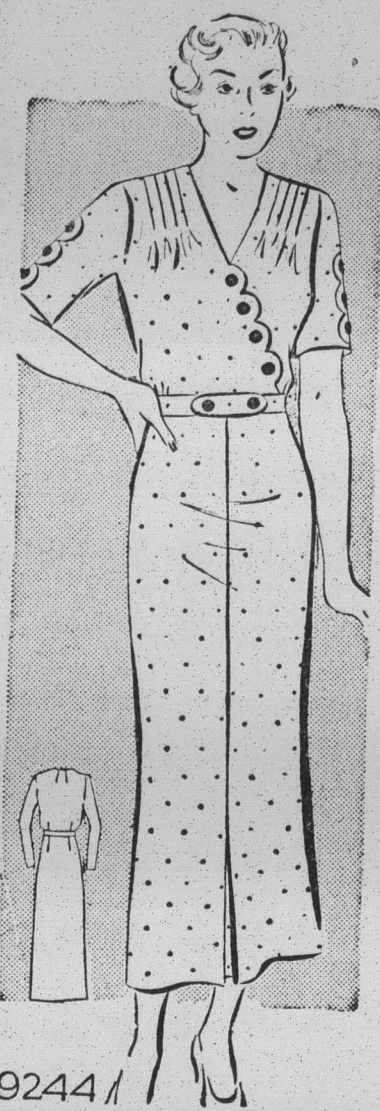

His heart beat faster. The head lamps of what looked like a taxicab dimly visible through fog! Indeed, perhaps the sound of the motor, although he had not recognized the fact, had prompted him to pause, to turn.

Vehicle Wheels Useless
Funchal, capital of the Madeira islands, is so hilly that wheeled vehicles are useless. Sleds with greased runners provide the popular method of rapid transit—that is, as rapid as bullocks can provide. It is in Funchal that much of the beautiful embroidery sold in large cities is turned out by deft fingers.

Simplicity and Smartness Here

PATTERN 9244

If you're the type who loves simplicity without severity, you'll enjoy a house frock with shoulder tucks, released into fullness at the bust, and a fascinating, scalloped surplice and sleeve trim. A single kick pleat provides the needed skirt fullness, and you will find that the seam leading to it gives a slender appearance. The dress is beautifully proportioned and certain to fit correctly. Have you shopped for the season's silks, cottons and rayons yet? The shops are teeming with most attractive prints to inspire your new wardrobe.

Pattern 9244 may be ordered only in sizes 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 4 yards 36-inch fabric.

SEND FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Complete diagrammed sew chart included. Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighteenth street, New York.

CORRECT GUIDES TO QUILT MAKING

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

The cutting diagrams for Colonial quilt No. 97B and Indian Wedding Ring No. 90B are offered to quilt makers who are particular to have the patches cut out right. These cutouts include the seam allowance. It is necessary to cut the patches out right if you want neat results. The Indian Wedding Ring has five different pieces to be cut out and the Colonial quilt is set together, leaving a running vine between units. The Indian Wedding Ring is identical with the Double Wedding Ring, only more patches are used to produce the effect.

Send 10 cents to our quilt department and we will mail both of these cutouts sets postpaid.

Address—HOME CRAFT COMPANY, DEPARTMENT D, Nineteenth and St. Louis Avenue, St. Louis, Mo.

Virtue in Lemon

It is, indeed, the greatest contribution one can make to city and nation that one should be a good man, a good woman, reverencing truth, justice, nobility, honor, chivalry, and trying to exalt them in all that one is and does; despising everything unfair and mean, and making one's fellows see by the way one acts what a beneficent and royal thing is trade, or mechanical industry, or the interpretation of the law, or the healing or nursing of the sick, or the pursuit of knowledge or art, or the teaching of children.—John Hunter.

FOR SCIENTIFIC WAR ON LOCUST

Airplane Enlisted in Fight to Control Pest.

During the past nine years locust swarms have been devastating vast areas in Africa and western Asia, and since 1929 experts have been studying means of controlling the insects. Recently, at an international locust conference held in London, it was resolved that the locusts could be halted through the control of their breeding grounds, or, if they are already in migration, through their destruction in flight.

Agricultural development in Africa has been considerably impeded by the depredations of the locusts, which have caused losses of approximately $35,000,000. Investigations have now disclosed that each species of locust inhabits exclusively a definite zone of vegetation and that its migrations are governed by the seasons. Many of these breeding regions have now been located. The desert locust, for instance, is known to breed in the remote lands south of the Sahara and to migrate northward to the fertile Mediterranean coast of Africa.

Once the breeding areas have been found, the conference reports, the next step in control is to establish field stations where the life habits of the insects will be studied. Evidence already gathered tends to show that swarms form when the life cycles of solitary locusts are accelerated, causing a rapid multiplication of numbers.

As swarms gather preparatory to flight, if their migratory courses have been discovered as well as their breeding sources, it is then possible, recent experiments in Africa indicate, to destroy them with poison dust sprayed from airplanes. Locusts make no effort, it has been shown, to avoid a cloud of sodium arsenate dust blown across their line of flight. Nor does the passage of an airplane through or across their ranks deter them from the course.

Most of the locusts passing through the sodium arsenate eventually drop out of the swarm to their death, apparently because the inhalation of the dust brings on paralysis. The poison will remain fatal to a passing swarm for about three minutes. It must be discharged several times for large swarms and must be sprayed at a height of about 100 feet to avoid damage to crops.

CHAPTER I

Today Mexico is going forward in its national efforts to establish a new form of social, political and economic security for the 16,552,722 Mexican citizens within the international boundary-lines of her vast and rich land. Nature has been kind to Mexico. Mineral wealth is to be found throughout the country in great abundance. Gold, copper, silver, lead, zinc, mercury, and petroleum are minerals that have reaped huge fortunes for many foreigners, who greedily took all from Mexican soil and left nothing but lies and slander in return. Thus is the present situation of a great nation; a nation overflowing with natural wealth and starving for monetary wealth.

But Mexico is not without her wise men. President Lazaro Cardenas, Emilio Portez Gil, Plutarco Elias Calles, Pascual Ortiz Rubio, and Abelardo L. Rodriguez are busy men. They are busy men because they are building a new Mexico; they are building a Mexico for Mexicans. No other government, no wealthy capitalist, no church is going to educate, feed and clothe the Mexican people, so Mexico must assume this task alone through the medium of her national governments, both State and Federal.

It has become an international custom for people of foreign nations to commonly term taxation in Mexico, confiscation. Let us investigate this so-called confiscation. Most of the hue and cry resulting from Mexican taxation, or call it confiscation if you like, originates from large mining and oil corporations whose financial stock is mostly foreign. The word foreign used herein, pertains to all peoples and nations excepting only the Republic of Mexico and her citizens.

Every drop of oil drained from Mexican soil and exported, never comes back. Oil, like other minerals, once consumed cannot be replanted into the earth for reproduction. Consequently, the Mexican Government is under obligation to its citizens to safeguard those natural resources which once exhausted are not replenishable. There is only one course open to preserve these valuable natural resources for the generations of Mexicans that are yet to come; that course involves the levy of just taxes on all natural resource products exported to foreign nations.

The question arises of what constitutes a justified tax. Since oil and other natural resources are beyond the means of human replenishment, they should command a very high tax in proportion to their sale value. But those natural resources which can be replenished by man, should bring a very low tax in proportion to their sale value for it stimulates employment in both production and consumption. Greedy foreign financiers care little about the Mexico of tomorrow. These rulers of gold are not followers of the Golden Rule. Little do they care whether or not Mexico shall have an adequate supply of oil, zinc, mercury or gold for her population 300 years from 1935. It is little wonder that the Mexican Government has been forced to adopt a socialistic course to overthrow a capitalistic-monopolized foreign Mexico, and through civilized action restore to the Mexican people a government that is truly for, by and of the people within their Republic.

Mexico is a peaceful nation. May 23, 1934, the Mexican Government declared an embargo on shipments of arms to Bolivia and Paraguay in compliance with the League of Nations move to end the Gran Chaco war. After the enactment of the arms embargo, an appeal was sent to the two hostile South American nations by the Mexican Government "to make a supreme effort to reach an immediate, direct settlement." Mexico was the first nation to declare an arms embargo on Bolivia and Paraguay in accordance with the policy of the League of Nations. And yet there are many Americans and Europeans who delight in calling Mexican Government officials tyrants and barbarians.
